

The Psychology of Satisfaction: An Olist Behavioral Analysis

Bridging the gap between Logistics and Customer Sentiment

Anna Louise | Data Scientist & Digital Humanist

Key Takeaways

The 2-Week Wall

Satisfaction drops vertically after 14 days, regardless of the estimated date.

The Expectation Gap

Customers punish delay more than they reward speed.

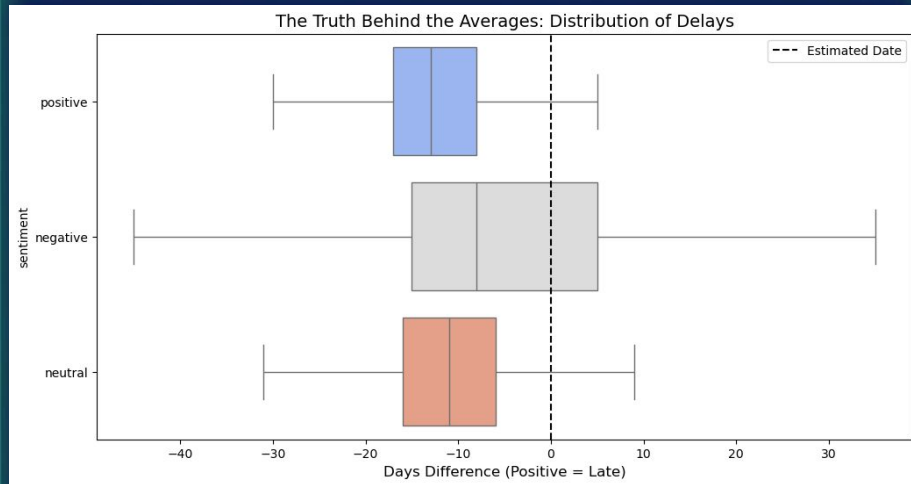

Visual Trust

Products with <5 photos suffer from 'Blind Purchase' anxiety.

Why do customers leave 1-star reviews even when we deliver 'on time'?

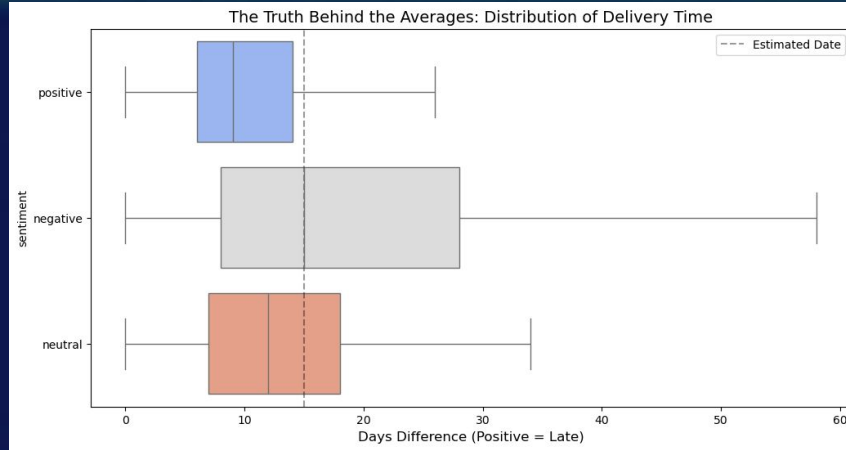

- Olist connects sellers to marketplaces
- Logistics are decentralized
- The CEO needs to reduce churn.

The Expectation Gap: Why 'Beating the Estimate' Isn't Enough

Insight: Even unhappy customers received their package 5 days before the estimated date. The estimate is too conservative to be meaningful.

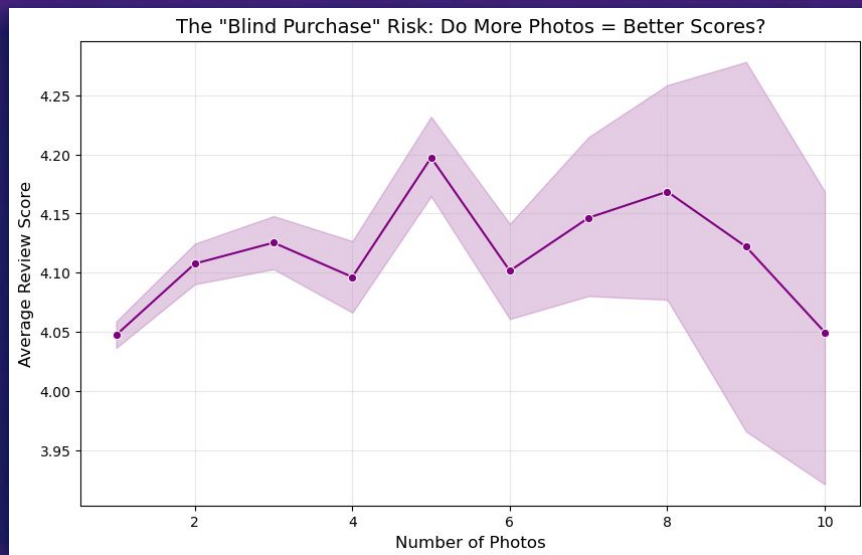

The 14-Day Patience Threshold

The Danger Zone (>15 Days)

Satisfaction remains stable for two weeks, then crashes.
Speed is the only metric that matters here.

The Blind Purchase Risk

High Risk Categories

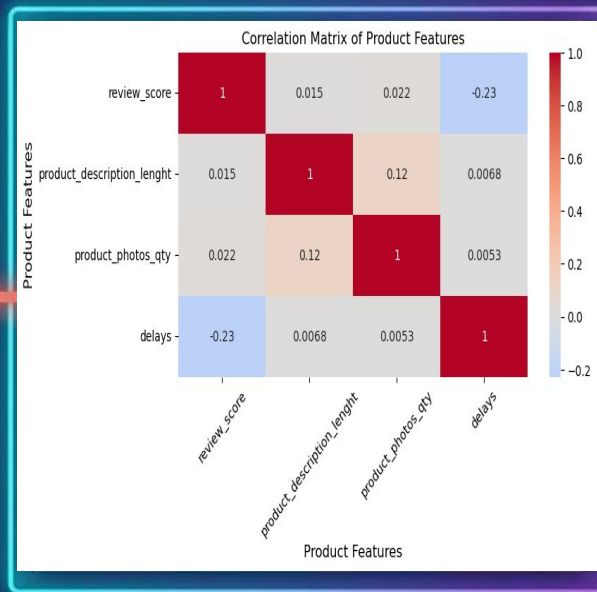

1. Office Furniture (Complex Assembly)
2. Fashion (Sizing Uncertainty)

Recommendation:

Mandate a 5-Photo Minimum for these categories.

The Correlation Reality Check

Logistics is the primary driver (-0.23).

Content is a hygiene factor, not a magic fix.

Immediate Action: The 'Villain' Seller List

seller_id	total_orders	bad_reviews	bad_review_rate	delivery_time
320000	259	11	64.29%	14.51
340001	209	15	50.99%	14.62
350002	176	11	48.69%	15.83
370003	269	13	39.00%	16.19
370005	206	16	24.99%	15.98
580006	238	14	10.28%	16.13
530007	195	15	12.87%	16.12
530008	106	10	69.76%	13.24
560009	73	5	52.09%	13.71
500000	103	3	64.29%	14.51

Removing these top 50 offenders would eliminate 20% of negative reviews immediately.

Next Steps

Purge

Offboard sellers with >40% negative reviews.

Warn

Add 'High Delay Risk' warnings in the app for >14 day estimates.

Enrich

Mandate 5+ photos and size charts for Fashion/Furniture.

Thank You
